FOREWORD

Washington voters said clearly and convincingly in 1972 they wanted to know the sources of financial support for election campaigns in Washington State. The passage of Initiative 276 that year placed on the law books one of this nation's most comprehensive and demanding campaign finance management and reporting requirements.

In the six years that have followed, candidates, political committee treasurers and others have worked diligently to meet the obligations the law places on them. Because of their efforts it is possible for the Public Disclosure Commission to prepare and publish this 1978 Election Financing Fact Book.

This publication is the product of the imagination and dedication of Paul Gillie, research analyst for the Commission, and Cindy Fey, a former Commission research analyst, who rejoined the staff for several months during the 1978 campaign. It is the most extensive publication of its nature ever developed from the reports filed with the Commission. Every effort has been made to assure its accuracy and objectivity.

The members of the Public Disclosure Commission believe the citizens of the state will find this to be a beneficial contribution to increased understanding of the nature and extent of campaign financing in this state.

TRENDS AND COMPARISONS

The 1978 election year was the third year of biennial legislative elections since the Public Disclosure Act was adopted by initiative in 1972, and had the second cycle of county level administrative elections to take place under the act. This section of the report offers some comparisons between the 1978 campaign financing figures found in the following sections of the report and statistics from the earlier years of disclosure reporting.

The Legislature

The following tables present some comparative figures pertaining to legislative candidates. In the first table, data for the 1974 campaign is taken from Jolene Unsoeld's Who Gave? Who Got? How Much? (1975 edition).

	1974	1976	1978
Total Contributions to Legislative Candidates	$1,720,435	$2,254,381 (+31%)	$3,053,400 (+35%)
Total Expenditures Made By Legislative Candidates	$1,615,630	$2,067,427 (+28%)	$2,790,628 (+35%)

Average Expenditures Reported By General Election Candidates Washington State Legislature, 1976 & 1978

	1976	1978
Winners in contested campaigns	9,975	13,647 (+37%)
Losers in contested campaigns	6,865	10,347 (+51%)
Democrats with opposition	8,577	10,889 (+27%)
Republicans with opposition	8,263	13,105 (+59%)
Incumbents with opposition	9,689	12,015 (+24%)
Challengers to incumbents	6,502	10,451 (+61%)

The Counties

Compliance with campaign reporting requirements by county candidates was much better in 1978 than it had been four years earlier. As one indication of this improvement, only 9 of the 607 county candidates failed to file any campaign finance reports, compared with 21 of 623 candidates in 1974 who filed no campaign reports in 1974. Commission staff also noted that 1978 candidate reports were more complete and more timely than those of previous years.

Comparisons of contributions or expenditures between 1974 and 1978 are not possible because of changes in the reporting requirements. In 1974, candidates whose total expenditures were not expected to exceed $1,000 were exempted by the commission from all campaign finance reporting, leaving no data on the public record as to their contributions and expenditures for the 334 candidates who accepted this exemption. By 1978, the commission was requiring candidates with this exemption to file a single post-election summary showing total contributions received and total expenditures made. There were 161 candidates in 1978 who chose this reporting option and another 137 who chose a simpler option provided by the commission, mini reporting, for those with campaign expenditures of $200 or less.

Federal Campaigns

In 1976, total expenditures reported by candidates in the state's seven congressional districts were $967,941. In that year, six incumbents ran for re-election and all six were returned to office. The highest expenditures occurred in the single district with no incumbent, the sixth, where total expenditures reached $274,505, and the winner, Norm Dicks, reported spending $138,590.

In 1978, total reported expenditures in the seven districts amounted to $2,480,126 -- an increase of 156%. As in 1976, six incumbents sought re-election and one seat was open. In 1978, however, one of the incumbents was defeated. Rep. Jack Cunningham, whose total reported expenditures were $437,695, was defeated in the seventh district by Mike Lowry, who reported spending $204,397. Total expenditures for the open seat in the second district reached $589,896, but were exceeded by expenditures in the fifth district -- $617,279.

Political Action Committees

Section V of this report defines the term "political action committees" and gives some detail on the activities of the 15 leading PAC's of 1978 -- representing businesses, labor union members, teachers, public employees, dentists, utilities, bank employees, realtors, members of the medical profession, the construction industry, and home builders. In addition to those 15, other PAC's active during 1978 represented chiropractors, the hospitality industry, electrical contractors, insurance agents, nurses, automobile dealers, title insurance firms, beer and wine distributors, airline employees, aluminum factory employees, the small loan industry, credit unions, food processors, horse breeders, optometrists, pharmacists, tobacco and candy distributors, engineers, the manufactured housing industry, trial lawyers, and specific labor organizations including teamsters and plumbers.

The list of such political action committees registered with the commission has continued to grow each year. In the period between the 1976 general election and the beginning of the 1978 campaigns, an additional 20 committees began reporting. These included new committees formed at Peoples National Bank, Puget Sound Mutual Savings Bank, and Washington Mutual Savings Bank, joining those created in previous years at Seattle First National, Rainier Bank, Pacific Bank, Old National Bank, Puget Sound National, and Bank of Everett.

One of the committees organized early in 1978 was the United Public Employee Coalition, which eventually contributed $75,500 to Legislative campaigns. Members of the coalition included the Washington Education Association, Seattle Fire Fighters, Northwestern States Council #14 of the Service Employees' International Union, Washington Federation of State Employees, State Council of Police Officers, State Council of Fire Fighters, Washington Public Employees Association, and the State Council of County and City Employees.

The impact of PAC's on the legislative campaigns has steadily increased every two years. In 1974 there were seven PAC's whose contributions to legislative candidates and caucuses exceeded $10,000. Together these seven PAC's contributed $281,030 to legislative campaigns in 1974. By 1976, the amount had increased to $353,188. In 1978, the same seven PAC's gave $450,087 to legislative campaigns and the number of PAC's with contributions exceeding $10,000 had increased to 21. The following table tracks the contribution records of the largest of these committees over the three election years.

There has also been an escalation in the size of PAC contributions to individual candidates. The largest PAC contribution in 1974 was the $3,500 that went to the campaign of Sen. Max Benitz from United for Washington. Two years later the largest PAC contribution was a total of $7,100 to the campaign of Rep. Ken Eikenberry from United for Washington. In 1978, the largest contribution to a single candidate was $15,000 from the United Public Employee Coalition to senate candidate Steve Corker. In the 38th district senatorial primary, United for Washington gave $10,000 to Sen. August Mardesich and the Washington State Labor Council gave an equal amount to his opponent, Larry Vognild. UPEC also gave $10,500 to Vognild.

The Political Parties

A previous commission publication, "Financial Participation of Political Party Organizations in the 1976 Elections", reported in some detail on political party organizations at the state and county level, their sources of funds, and their expenditures to or on behalf of their candidates. For 1977 the commission staff prepared a summary of receipts and expenditures reported by the state committees of the two major parties similiar in format to the summary found in Section VI of this publication. From these summaries of three consecutive years, some observations are offered:

In 1976, a year of presidential and major state elections, there were 2,819 individuals who made monetary contributions to either the Democratic or Republican state committee.

In 1977, an off year for partisan elections, there were 1,530 individuals who contributed to the state party organizations.

In 1978, a year without presidential or any state-wide partisan elections, the number of contributors increased to 9,512. Assuming that most contributors are also registered to vote, this figure means that one of every 200 registered voters in the state in 1978 made a financial contribution to one of the state party organizations, as compared with one of every 700 who made such contributions in 1976.

The record for the two parties over the three year span:

Number of Individual Contributors	1976	1977	1978
Democratic State Committee	1,190	1,056	4,068
Republican State Committee	1,629	474	5,444
Totals	2,819	1,530	9,512

In Section VI of this report it is noted that the Democratic state organization contributed $14,625 directly to legislative candidates in 1978 and that the Republican state party contributed $42,200 to legislative candidates. In both cases, this represents an increase over 1976 when Democratic state party legislative contributions were $10,950 and Republican contributions were $2,500. These figures represent reported direct monetary contributions only and do not reflect expenditures the state organizations may have made that benefited their slates of candidates generally or specific candidates individually.

A new development in 1978 was the participation of the Republican National Committee in the state legislative campaigns. Twenty-two candidates for the state house of representatives reported contributions of money or services from the Republican National Committee, totaling $35,325. The largest amount reported by a single candidate was $3,500 from the R.N.C. in addition to $525 in campaign services.

SECTION II

THE COUNTIES: PARTISAN ELECTIONS

Candidates' Reported Contributions and Expenditures by Counties

THE COUNTIES: PARTISAN ELECTIONS

In most of Washington's 39 counties, at least seven elective officials are chosen in partisan elections during the year that falls midway between presidential election years. These include one county commissioner (two other commissioners are elected during presidential years), an assessor, auditor, clerk, prosecuting attorney, sheriff, treasurer, and, in all counties above the fourth class, a coroner.

Exceptions in 1978 were:

-- Pend Oreille County, where a second commissioner was elected to fill an unexpired term;

-- Clallam County, where the office of clerk is an appointed position, rather than elected, under a home rule charter;

-- Clark County, where a second commissioner was elected to fill an unexpired term;

-- King County, where the office of prosecuting attorney was the only partisan position on the ballot in 1978, under a home rule charter.

Altogether in 1978 there were elections for 284 partisan county government positions. A total of 607 candidates filed for these positions. Incumbent officials ran for reelection to 238 of these positions, and 115 of the incumbents had no opposition in either the primary or general election. Of the 123 incumbents with opposition, 91 were elected and 32 were defeated. There were 46 open positions with no incumbent in the race.

As shown in the accompanying table, the office of sheriff attracted more candidates and more expenditures than any of the other positions in county government.

For each county, the commission staff has computed the average expenditures per registered voter--the total of all reported expenditures divided by the number of registered voters in the county. Excluding King County from the calculations, the statewide average is $1.07 per registered voter that was spent by candidates for county offices. There was but very little variation from that statewide average in the counties. For 27 of the 38 counties, the average fell between 50 cents and $1.50 per voter.

Summary of Expenditures Reported by Candidates for County Offices in Partisan Elections in 1978

Office	Number of Candidates	Total Reported Expenditures
Assessor	71	127,876
Auditor	69	161,058
Clerk	62	74,993
Coroner	38	32,882
Commissioner--Full term	125	342,327
Commissioner--Unexpired term	9	46,039
Prosecutor (Except King Co.)	45	83,809
Prosecutor (King Co. only)	4	330,271
Sheriff	122	413,882
Treasurer	62	85,426
 TOTAL	 607	 1,698,563

On the following pages, all of the candidates are listed by county and position sought. Incumbents are denoted with asterisks. As in other sections of this report, election results are shown in the following way:

LP = Lost primary LG = Lost general election
 WP = Won primary WG = Won general election
 UP = Unopposed in primary UG = Unopposed in general election
 Unopp. = No opposition in either primary or general.

The column headed Reporting Option shows the campaign reporting option chosen by the candidate:

Mini can be chosen by candidates whose total campaign expenditures, in addition to any filing fees, do not exceed $200. Itemized reports of contributions and expenditures are not required, and therefore, these amounts are not available for this report. There were 137 candidates who used this option.

Abbreviated can be chosen by candidates whose total expenditures do not exceed $1,000 and who receive no contributions greater than $100. These candidates are required only to file a post-election summary of total contributions and expenditures. There were 161 candidates who used this option.

Full reporting is required of all candidates who cannot qualify for mini or abbreviated reporting. This involves regular reports of contributions as they are received and periodic reports of summarizing receipts and itemizing expenditures.

As in other sections of this report, the figures shown as total contributions and total expenditures are as of the last report filed during 1978.

SECTION V

THE POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES

Analysis of 1978 Legislative Contributions by Major
Political Action Committees

Campaign Contributions Reported by the 15 Leading Political Action Committees During 1978

THE POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES

The term "political action committee" or its usual abbreviation, "PAC", is widely used in campaign finance reporting, but the term is not defined in the Public Disclosure Law. As it is used, the term has come to mean a group which raises and distributes political campaign funds and which has the following characteristics:

(1) Those who contribute to the PAC fund share a common interest which may be their occupation (e.g., teachers, engineers, or trial lawyers), their place of employment (e.g., Pacific Northwest Bell or Aluminum Company of America), or their industry (e.g., restaurant owners or automobile dealers). A PAC is often affiliated with a trade or professional association, draws its membership from the association, and is known as the political arm of the association. Contributors to a PAC may be not only individuals, but in some cases are companies, organizations, or even other PAC's.

(2) PAC campaign contributions are made to a number of candidates (or issues), distinguishing PAC's from other political committees, as defined in the law, which are created to support (or oppose) a single candidate or ballot issue.

(3) A PAC is usually what is defined in the law as a continuing committee, organized not solely for a single election campaign but continuing its activity from election to election.

(4) Contributions made by a PAC are not necessarily confined to candidates of a single political party. While a PAC may tend to favor one party's candidates more than those of another party, it remains a non-partisan organization and is thus distinguished from those political committees which are affiliated with a political party.

Meeting this description of a PAC were 114 committees registered with the commission and reporting some activity during 1978. Of this number, 57 were business-related and their total receipts were $1,133,438; 50 were labor-related with total receipts of $801,535; 7 were health-related with total receipts of $157,039. Not all of these funds were used for political campaign contributions; depending on the nature and policies of each committee, expenditures were sometimes made for other purposes of the organization.

This section contains information extracted from the 1978 disclosure reports of the 15 largest political action committees in the state of Washington. The contributions of these 15 PAC's, $710,633, amounted to 23 per cent of the money raised by legislative candidates in 1978.

The Political Action Committees

The following table presents an analysis of the legislative contributions by the largest PAC's. Their contributions to specific candidates are listed in Section I of this report. The second table in this section details all the other campaign contributions reported by these PAC's during 1978.
